Gospel: Matthew 1:1-25
Epistle: Hebrews 11:9-40

The genealogy of Christ from either Matthew 1 or Luke 3 is not used at all in the West and is largely scoffed at as being very dull reading. Similarly, the Epistle reading consists of a long list of people who might be referred to as God's Hall of Fame. This is also omitted in the Western lectionaries.

Differences in Genealogies

A glaring difference between Matthew's and Luke's genealogy is that Matthew traces Christ's roots back to David through Solomon, whereas Luke traces Christ to David through Nathan, another of David's sons by Bathsheba (1 Chronicles 3:5). See the Appendix for a complete list of the genealogies as listed in Matthew, Luke, Kings, Chronicles and Genesis.

One will note that both Matthew's and Luke's genealogies trace Christ's line through Zerubbabel and his father Shealtiel (highlighted in Table I); where Zerubbabel was the governor of Judah following the return from exile in Babylon (Haggai 1:1, 2:2, Ezra 3:2). What is difficult to understand about these two genealogies is how both could be correct. How could Shealtiel have two fathers: Neir and Jeconiah (Matthew 1:12, Luke 3:27)? How could Joseph, the husband of the Virgin Mary have two fathers: Heli (or Eli) and Jacob (Matthew 1:16, Luke 3:23)?

Copyright © Mark Kern 2001

According to Jewish law, both can be correct. (See The Family Tree of Jesus). If Heli and Jacob were half-brothers with the same mother and Heli married but died childless, Jacob would be obligated to marry Heli's widow and raise up children for his brother (Deuteronomy 25:5-6). Thus Joseph could have been the natural son of Jacob but the legal son of Heli. Julius Africanus¹ states that this is, in fact, what happened.

Similarly in the case of Shealtiel: Matthew traces Joseph back to David through the line of the reigning kings of Judah. Luke traces Joseph back to David through a royal line that wasn't the royal family. The problem occurred with Shealtiel who was born in captivity. Jeconiah (Jehoiachin) was taken into captivity at the age of 18 (2 Kings 24:8-12) but lived in prison until he was 55 years old (2 Kings 25:27-30). According to some commentators, Shealtiel was the natural son of Neir but married Jeconiah's only child (a daughter), making him the legal heir to the throne and the legal son of Jeconiah (Keil, quoted by Unger, Bible Dictionary).

One might ask why Matthew and Luke would record different genealogies. One answer to this is that Matthew effectively records Mary's genealogy while Luke records Joseph's genealogy. From Figure 1, Joseph and Mary had the same grandfather (Matthan), making them cousins. Thus Matthew records Mary's genealogy under the name of Joseph's (natural) genealogy since the genealogies of women were not traced. In Mary's case, this makes sense since Jesus did not have a human father. Luke, thus, recorded Joseph's legal genealogy since Jacob raised up children for his brother Heli and Joseph was legally Heli's son.

These genealogies criss cross again with Shealtiel. Matthew follows the legal side since his genealogy traces the reigning kings. Luke follows the natural generation back to David. Since Matthew wrote his Gospel first, Luke can be seen as adding to what Matthew wrote for completeness. [Matthew wrote his Gospel in Hebrew before leaving for (black) Africa a few years after Pentecost. Nathaniel took a copy of it written in the original Hebrew to Thomas in India by c. 50 AD. Luke's Gospel was written a few years before Acts, which ends chapter 28 in 62 AD.]

Another aspect of Matthew's genealogy is the omission of some names found in 2 Kings and 1 Chronicles. Between Joram and Uzziah, 2 Kings and 1 Chronicles include three additional names (Ahaziah, Joash, and Amaziah, 1 Chronicles 3:11-12) and one additional name between Josiah and Jeconiah (Jehoiakim: 1 Chronicles 3:15) around the time of the Babylonian captivity. Most studies of the Kings of Judah deal with who reigned when; Matthew's and Luke's genealogy on the other hand addresses parentage, not a succession of kings. During this time also, there was a number of occasions where there were co-regencies: father and son reigning at the same time. In addition, one of the omitted names, Ahaziah, reigned for only one year. Thus, the matter of the missing names in Matthew's genealogy is complicated and can't be easily dismissed as an error. John Chrysostom refers to a work by Jerome and another by Justin Martyr that explains the reason for these missing names in Matthew's genealogy (Homily IV on Matthew 1). Neither of these works is easily available in English.

Eusebius stated, "Some of those who are inserted in this genealogical table succeeded by natural descent, the son from the father; while others, though born of one father, were ascribed by name to another. Thus neither of the Gospels is in error. Both these accounts (Matthew and Luke) are strictly true and come down to Joseph with considerable intricacy indeed, yet quite accurately" ("Church History", I, vii, 1-10, Post-Nicene Fathers, Series II, vol. 1).

A textual error can be noted by comparing Luke's genealogy with the Hebrew text from Genesis. Luke includes the Patriarch Cainan in his genealogy (Luke 3:36), as does the Septuagint (a translation of the Old Testament into Greek by Jewish scholars in c. 200 BC). However, the Hebrew Old Testament omits Cainan (Genesis 10). Probably the best explanation for this is that there is a copying error in the oldest extant Hebrew texts (c. 10th Century AD) that is not in the oldest extant copy of the Greek Septuagint (c. 4th Century AD).

Genealogies: Why Bother?

The main point of both Matthew's and Luke's genealogy of Christ is to emphasize the Incarnation. Christ had been sent by the Father (1 John 4:10, John 8:18-29) and had offered His flesh as the "one sacrifice for sins forever" (Hebrews 10:12, 9:28, 1 John 2:2, Galatians 2:4). He is called "the first fruits of those who had died" (1 Corinthians 15:20-23); without Him, we are still in our sins (1 Corinthians 15:17). The Apostle John linked the spirit of the Antichrist with those who denied that Christ came in the flesh (1 John 4:3); he also stated that many false prophets (i.e. heretics) have gone out into the world (1 John 4:1).

John Chrysostom had to deal with many of these false prophets who denied that Jesus was truly a man. [If He weren't a man like us, He couldn't die in our place as the "one sacrifice for sins forever"]. They claimed He took a semblance of a body, but from heaven, similar to the theophanies that visited Abraham (Genesis 18). They claimed that He passed through the Virgin Mary's womb as water through a conduit or channel. Chrysostom answers this by saying: "If this were so, He has nothing in common with us, but the flesh is of some other kind and not of the mass which belongs to us. How then was He of the root of Jesse? How was He a rod (Isaiah 11:1)? How the son of Man? How was Mary His mother? How was He of David's seed (John 7:42)? How did He take the form of a servant (Philippians 2:7)? How was the Word made flesh (John 1:14)? Therefore that He was of us and of our substance and of the Virgin's womb is manifest from these things and from others beside" (Homily IV on Matthew 1).

Chrysostom continued, "Hearing these things, arise and surmise nothing ordinary; but even because of this very thing, especially marvel: that being Son of the Un-originate God and His true Son, He allowed Himself to be called Son of David that He might make you son of God (Romans 8:14-19). He allowed a slave (i.e. Joseph) to be father to Him, that He might make the Lord Father to you, a slave" (Homily II on Matthew 1).

Genealogy Traced Through Joseph

One will note that both Matthew's and Luke's genealogy trace Jesus' ancestry through Joseph and not Mary, even though Joseph had no part in Mary's conception. There are several reasons for this. The first and most obvious one is that it was not customary to trace the genealogy of women. Genealogies were traced through the head of the family -- the husband (compare Genesis 5 and 10).

A second reason for tracing Jesus' genealogy through Joseph is that he was Jesus' legal father according to Jewish law. However, this didn't really make any difference to the genealogical line since Joseph and Mary were cousins. They had a common grandfather:

Matthan (Matthew 1:15). From Matthan back to David, the ancestry was the same for Mary as it was for Joseph; thus Matthew traces Mary's ancestry by tracing Joseph's.

Figure 1 shows Jesus' family tree going back to Matthan. Note how there can easily be two distinct lines going back to David: one as mentioned by Matthew through Matthan, Luke mentions the other and going through Heli (or Eli) and Matthat. Either of these lines fulfills Jacob's prophecy for his son Judah: "A ruler shall not fail from Judah nor a governor from his loins until there come the things stored up for Him; and He is the expectation of the Gentiles" (Genesis 49:10 LXX). John Chrysostom translated the middle section of this passage "until He comes for whom it is appointed."

Matthew's genealogy lists three sets of fourteen generations from Abraham to Christ. Yet only thirteen are listed from the Babylonian captivity to Christ (if Christ is the thirteenth). There are two possible explanations for this. John Chrysostom thought that Matthew had included the Babylonian captivity itself as one generation (Homily IV on Matthew 1). Another possibility is the age difference between Joseph and Mary: Joseph was 80; Mary was 15. They were at least a generation apart in age.

The Virgin Birth Was Concealed

Another reason for tracing Christ's genealogy through Joseph was to conceal the Virgin birth. Elizabeth and Zachariah knew (Luke 1:41-45), as did Joseph and the two midwives who attended Mary at Jesus' birth. But the shepherds aren't told these details (Luke 2:8-20). Early historical accounts of Joseph and Mary's life reveal that some of the priests had been told of the Virgin birth, but they don't seem to have believed it. For more details see the Feast Day for the Nativity of Mary.

According to Mosaic Law, if a betrothed virgin willingly had sex with someone, both she and her lover were to be stoned to death for adultery (Deuteronomy 22:23-24). In order to protect the Virgin Mary from suspicion, Joseph was directed to raise the Holy Child as his own Son (Matthew 1:18-25). This did create some controversy in that Joseph was presumed by the priests to have "defiled" the Virgin Mary before their marriage. Both Joseph and Mary denied any wrong doing under oath before the priests in Jerusalem and the "waters of conviction" were applied to them both. [The "water of conviction" was holy water used in the Old Testament to discern extra-marital affairs before the Lord in the Temple. See Numbers 5:11-31.] When neither Joseph nor Mary was "convicted", the priest stated, "If the Lord God did not disclose your sin, neither will I judge you". Thus the priests were presented with evidence of the Virgin birth, but they do not seem to have grasped it.

John Chrysostom stated that the reason for concealing this from the Jewish leaders was that, "If after so many miracles, they still called Him son of Joseph (i.e. and not Son of God), how before the miracles would they have believed that He was born of a virgin?" (Homily III on Matthew 1). Ignatius of Antioch (late 1st Century) stated that the virginity of Mary after conception and after the birth of her Son was hidden from the Prince of this world also. (Ad Ephesians 19:1)

In our Gospel reading, we notice Joseph's difficulty when he discovered Mary was pregnant. From historical sources, Joseph was away from home for about six months building houses near the Sea of Galilee beginning just before the Annunciation. During this period, Mary visited Elizabeth, her cousin, for three months before the birth of John the Baptist. Upon his arrival home, Joseph was confronted with a very obviously pregnant Mary, who was six months along.

This put Joseph in a major dilemma. Mary had been born of aged parents similar to John the Baptist. Prior to the conception of Mary by Anna, her mother, her parents had vowed to the Lord that if He gave them a child, they would dedicate the child to the Lord's service just as Hannah did with the Prophet Samuel (1 Samuel 1:10-28). And thus Mary grew up living in the Temple just as Samuel did.

By the time Mary was twelve, both her parents had died of old age, leaving her an orphan. She, herself, had also vowed to the Lord to serve Him in fasting and prayer just like the Prophetess Anna (Hebrew: Hannah) did at that time (Luke 2:36-38). By the time Mary reached age fourteen, however, the priests did not like the idea of a young girl living in the Temple since hanky-panky could cause the Temple to be defiled.

After much discussion they consulted the Lord in the Holy of Holies and Joseph, a recent widower was selected to be her husband/caretaker so that she could continue her vow as she wished without causing embarrassment to them. Joseph responded by saying, "I am an old man and have children. Why do you hand over to me this infant who is younger than my grandsons?" Yet he did as he was instructed, and intended to honor Mary's vow.

But now, seeing her six months pregnant, he didn't know what to do. Mary and her five young virgin friends testified that no one had touched Mary and that they had been continuing in prayer and fasting since Joseph left. Joseph was very self-restrained; he did not get passionate or jealous. "Being a just man, he did not want to make her a public example (i.e. death by stoning) and was considering divorcing her secretly" (Matthew 1:19). While he considered this, an angel appeared to him in a dream and explained things to him (Matthew 1:20-23). The child Mary was carrying was the Messiah and was conceived of the Holy Spirit! Thus the angel addressed Joseph as "son of David" and commanded Joseph to call His name Jesus (Hebrew: Joshua). By Joseph naming the child, Joseph assumed the role of His father and publicly accepted Jesus as his own son, thus deflecting suspicion regarding Jesus' true parentage.

Chrysostom comments on this: "Do you see his obedience and his submissive mind? Do you see a soul truly awakened and in all things incorruptible? For neither when he suspected something amiss could he endure to keep the Virgin with him; nor yet when he was freed from this suspicion, could he bear to cast her out, but rather he keeps her with him and ministers to the whole dispensation (Homily V on Matthew 1).

Matthew concludes the Gospel lesson by saying that Joseph "did not know her until she brought forth her firstborn Son" (Matthew 1:25). Chrysostom comments on this as follows: "He has used the word until not that you should suspect that afterwards he did know her, but to inform you that before the birth, the Virgin was wholly untouched by man. But why then, it may be said, has he used the word until? It is usual in Scripture to do this, and to use the expression without reference to limited times. For so with respect to the ark it is said 'The raven did not return until the water was dried from off the earth' (Genesis 8:7 LXX). And yet the raven did not return even after that time. And when discoursing also of God, the Scripture says: 'From age until age, Thou art' (Psalm 90:2 LXX), not as fixing limits in this case. And again when it is preaching the Gospel beforehand, it says: 'In His days shall righteousness spring up and abundance of peace until the moon be removed' (Psalm 72:7 LXX). It does not set a limit to this fair part of creation. So then here likewise it uses the word until to make certain what was before the birth; but as to what follows, it leaves you to make the inference." Chrysostom continued to say that Joseph kept Mary a virgin the rest of his life (Homily V on Matthew 1).

Christ Came as Physician, Not Judge

In itemizing His genealogy, Matthew points out some not so illustrious aspects of Jesus' ancestors. For example, "Jacob begot Judah and his brothers" (v.2). Together, Judah and his brothers are the twelve tribes of Israel. In Revelation 21:12, the gates of the New Jerusalem are inscribed with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. Yet four of the sons of Jacob (Dan, Naphtali, Gad and Asher) were children of slaves (Leah's and Rachael's maids Zilpah and Bilhah).

"Judah begot Perez and Zerah by Tamar" (Matthew 1:3). Tamar was Judah's daughter-in-law whose husband died. Judah had promised her his younger son for a husband according to Jewish law, but reneged on his promise. Tamar then pretended to be a prostitute and got pregnant by her father-in-law, Judah (Genesis 38:6-30). The twins that were born were likened by Chrysostom to the Jew and Christian (Homily III on Matthew 1, Homily 62 on Genesis 38).

Another figure in Christ's genealogy is the prostitute from Jericho, Rahab, who helped the spies and was spared during the destruction of Jericho (Joshua 2, 6). Boaz, Rahab's son married Ruth, a poverty-stricken Gentile who renounced her father, household, race, country and kindred (Matthew 1:5, Ruth 1-4). Ruth is a model for the Gentile church in the New Testament.

Other kings in Christ's genealogy, like Ahaz and Manasseh, led the people into idol worship, human sacrifice and witchcraft (2 Kings 16, 21). This ultimately led to the Babylonian captivity (2 Kings 24:1-4) and the burning and plundering of Jerusalem (2 Kings 25).

Commenting on the many examples of wickedness in Christ's genealogy, Chrysostom wrote: "If we were recounting the race of a mere man, one might naturally have been silent touching these things. But if of God Incarnate, so far from being silent one ought to make a glory of them, showing forth His tender care and His power. It was for this cause He came, not to escape our disgraces, but to bear them away. It is not only because He took flesh upon Him, and became man, that we stand justifiably amazed at Him. But also because He permitted to have such relatives, being in no respect ashamed of our evils. And this He was proclaiming from the very beginnings of His birth that He is ashamed of none of the things that belong to us. He has come as a physician and not as a Judge" (Homily III on Matthew 1).

The Fullness of Time

The Patriarch Jacob had said that Jesus would come when the Jewish rulers had come to an end (Genesis 49:10 LXX). This happened when Jerusalem was destroyed in 66-70 AD. Daniel also prophesied the exact year when Messiah would come (Daniel 9:24-26). It was this prophecy that the Magi followed in order to know when to come to worship the newborn King of the Jews (Matthew 2:1-2).

Chrysostom noted that Matthew began his Gospel with the genealogy: “The book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the Son of David, the Son of Abraham” (Matthew 1:1). Commenting on this, Chrysostom said: “Observe a most admirable order in the things he (i.e. Matthew) has mentioned. For he did not proceed directly to the birth, but puts us in mind, first, how many generations He was from Abraham, how many from David and how many from the captivity of Babylon. Thus he sets the careful hearer upon considering the times, to show that this is the Christ who was preached by the prophets. For when you have numbered the generations and have learned by the time that this is He, you will readily receive likewise the miracle which took place in His birth” (Homily IV on Matthew 1).

The Apostle Paul spoke of this also: “But when the fullness of time had come, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman, born under the Law to redeem those who were under the Law, that we might receive the adoption as sons” (Galatians 4:4-5).

Chrysostom also mentions that there is great significance to the names themselves in Jesus’ genealogy and that it was not without purpose that these names were given to His forbears. For example, the root meaning of some of the more familiar names is:

Abraham	Exalted father
Isaac	He laughs (Genesis 18:12)
Jacob	Heel, footprint (Genesis 3:15)
Judah	Praised
Joseph	He increases
David	Beloved one
Solomon	Peaceable or Peacemaker
Zerubbabel	Begotten in Babylon
Zadok	To be just or righteous

In mentioning this, Chrysostom had access to works by Justin Martyr (2nd Century) and Jerome (4th Century) on the same subject (Ibid.).

Thus, the central feature of the genealogy of Christ is the Incarnation. Some of the heretics over the last 1900 years have denied that Christ was truly a man; reading the genealogies contradicts the heretics very strongly.

Epistle: Hebrews 11:9-40

Parts of today's Epistle lesson are used in the Eastern lectionary also for the Sunday of All Saints (Hebrews 11:32-12:2) and for the 1st Sunday of Lent (Hebrews 11:24-26, 32-40). On the Sunday of All Saints, the theme is the communion of Saints; on the 1st Sunday of Lent, the theme is a vision of where we are going as we point toward Easter Sunday (or Pascha). In today's Epistle lesson, we look backward to see where we have come.

The Western lectionaries also use parts of today's Epistle lesson. Verses 8-19 are sometimes used for the 14th Sunday after Trinity and verses 1-19 are sometimes used for the 3rd Sunday after Epiphany. Thus East and West emphasize different parts of Hebrews 11.

Some of the people mentioned in Hebrews 11 are also included in the genealogy of the Gospel lesson: Enoch (Hebrews 11:5), Noah (Hebrews 11:7), Abraham (Hebrews 11:8-19), Isaac (Hebrews 11:20), Jacob (Hebrews 11:21), Rahab (Hebrews 11:31) and David (Hebrews 11:32). Common to all of them is a good testimony (Hebrews 11:39) of things they did by faith. They knew God's promises (Hebrews 11:39) and the things to come (Hebrews 11:20), but they never received the promises. In their life, they were ill-treated (Hebrews 11:37-38) by a world that was not worthy of them similar to their Lord in His 33 years. The conclusion of the Epistle lesson is that "God provided something better for us that they should not be made perfect apart from us" (Hebrews 11:40). To see how this applies to us, let us look at some of the details of the lives of the Old Testament Saints and compare that with our situation.

Abel, Enoch and Noah

Abel is remembered for having offered a more excellent sacrifice to God than his brother Cain (Hebrews 11:4). Since the Patriarchs before the flood were not meat-eaters², the implication is that Abel's offering was a whole burnt offering (Genesis 4:4) similar to that later decreed in the Mosaic Law (Exodus 29:38-42), Numbers 28:3-8). The only part of the animal Abel used was probably the skin for clothing (Genesis 3:21, Leviticus 7:8). It is interesting that Abel's technique in offering the best of his flock precisely anticipates the technique specified by Moses (Leviticus 1:10-13, 3:6-11).

"The Lord had regard for Abel and for his offering, but for Cain and for his offering, He had no regard" (Genesis 4:4-5). How could one know whether the Lord "had regard"? The usual way of offering a sacrifice was demonstrated by Elijah in his face-off with the prophets of Baal (1 Kings 18:21-39). After the sacrifice was placed on the altar, the sacrifice was considered "accepted" if the Lord sent down fire from heaven to consume it (1 Kings 18:23-24, 38-39). When Moses and Aaron first set up the sacrificial system, the Lord lit the fire (Leviticus 9:24) and instructed Moses and Aaron to maintain it (Leviticus 6:13). The fire of the Lord also fell on some people who rebelled against Him (Numbers 11:1, 16:35, Leviticus 10:1-2). Thus it was very obvious to Cain that he was rejected!

Following the rejected offering, the Lord spoke to Cain about his sin and about how the desire of his sin was after his soul, but that he must master it. Cain's response was to kill his brother, Abel (Genesis 4:7-8). Abel was the first of a long history of martyrs and his blood cried out to the Lord from the ground (Genesis 4:10). Similarly, the voice of the blood of the martyrs killed later on cries out to the Lord from the ground (Revelation 6:9-11) in the days before the Second Coming.

The righteousness of Abel, his offering and his martyrdom still speak to us (Hebrews 11:4). The voice of Abel's blood speaking is compared to the blood of Christ speaking (Hebrews 12:24). John Chrysostom stated³ that the message of the voice of Abel's blood is thus:

“Cain did not slay Abel's glory or his memory. Abel is not dead; therefore neither shall we die. The more grievous a man's sufferings are, so much the greater is his glory. These things do not take place with impunity nor lightly, neither do they pass away”.

Enoch lived five generations after Abel and benefited greatly from Abel's example. The Apostle Jude quoted a prophecy of Enoch regarding the Second Coming of Christ to judge the ungodly (Jude 1:14). How did Enoch know Christ? It was by faith and he pleased God (Hebrews 11:5). Evidently Enoch's faith was rather spectacular since he is one of only two people ever translated to heaven without seeing death (compare Genesis 5:22-24). The other was Elijah (2 Kings 2:1-12).

John Chrysostom stated that Enoch displayed greater faith than Abel. Enoch knew Abel⁴ and how he suffered and how Cain had gotten off easy. Chrysostom said⁵ that it would have been easy for Enoch to think that there is no point in suffering for God's sake since Abel was not rewarded in this life. “Abel honored God, yet God did not protect him. What advantage had he that was killed from the punishment of his brother?” However, Enoch knew about the resurrection and the rewards that God bestows (Jude 1:14) and his faith caused him to please God and his pleasing God caused his translation.

While Abel offered the proper sacrifice and Enoch preached Judgment Day, Noah went one step further in building an ark. It is often inferred that it took Noah about 100 years to build the ark⁶. The ark itself was 450 feet long (Genesis 6:15), had three decks (Genesis 6:16) and rode low in the water (half above, half below (Genesis 6:15, 7:20). For one family to build something this large had to have been a monumental undertaking. Modern Shipyards build ocean liners this big and bigger, but they employ thousands of people and take several years to do so. In addition to that, Noah had to get his own raw materials (fell trees) and cut them into planks for the hull and super structure of the ark as well as the interior rooms (Genesis 6:14).

⁶ Compare Genesis 5:32, 6:10 and 7:6.

Modern science has prepared⁷ a very interesting treatise on how eight people could have cared for all the animals in the ark, and how they could have carried adequate food and water.

Noah is referred to as a preacher of righteousness (2 Peter 2:5) and God warned him of things not yet seen. This was especially difficult for Noah: God told Noah to build a huge boat to survive a flood when it had never rained⁸ in the history of mankind! Clouds and rainbows mean rain; if that didn't happen until after the Flood, it must have taken a lot of faith to prepare a boat. Not only did Noah spend 100 years building a boat to protect his family against something that had never happened, but also the means of causing the Flood had never happened either. This was truly a warning of things not yet seen. Even the positioning of the ark in dry-dock prior to the Flood was crucial. One of the causes of the Flood was the "fountains of the great deep" (Genesis 7:11, 8:2), which sounds like undersea volcanic activity. Undersea volcanoes produce huge waves (tsunamis), which can turn a dry-docked, wooden boat into splinters unless the boat is positioned to receive the wave properly.

Just as Enoch preached of Judgment Day (Jude 1:14), so did Noah. The Lord, Himself, used Noah as an example of Judgment Day, illustrating the suddenness and finality of the Second Coming (Matthew 24:37-39, Luke 17:26-27).

Abraham, Isaac and Jacob

John Chrysostom stated⁹ that Abraham's task was more difficult than Abel's, Enoch's and Noah's. They had to go beyond human reasoning, but Abraham was asked to obey the Lord's commands even though the commands seemed to oppose the Lord's promises. For example, "By faith Abraham obeyed when he was called to go out to the place which he would receive as an inheritance. And he went out, not knowing where he was going. By faith he dwelt in the land of promise as in a foreign country" (Hebrews 11:8-9). He was told he was going to inherit this land; yet he lived in it and never received it. This is because "he waited for the city which has foundations whose craftsman and maker is God" (Hebrews 11:10).

In addition, the Lord had told him that his descendants would be as numberless as the dust on the earth (Genesis 13:16), yet it would be through Sarah that they would be numbered (Genesis 17:16-19). The Lord first mentioned how numerous Abraham's posterity could be when Abraham was 75 years old and Sarah was 66 years old (Genesis 12:1-3). It wasn't until 25 years later that Isaac was born (Genesis 21:5, 17:17). This required considerable patience on the part of Abraham. It taught Abraham to expect the miraculous in his dealings with God, since Sarah was at least 40 years past the age of child bearing when Isaac was born.

When Isaac was young, the Lord told Abraham to offer Isaac as a burnt offering on a mountaintop (Genesis 22:1-2). Hebrew tradition places¹⁰ this mountaintop as the site where the Temple in Jerusalem was later built. However this was contrary to the Lord's Law (which forbade human sacrifice) and was seemingly contrary to the Lord's promise that his posterity would be numbered through Isaac (Genesis 17:16-19). This did not deter Abraham; he told his two servants that he and Isaac were going to worship the Lord on the mountaintop and then return (Genesis 22:5). Isaac asked his father: “Where was the lamb for the burnt offering?” They brought wood and fire, but no animal. Abraham replied, “God will provide for Himself the lamb for the burnt offering” (Genesis 22:8). In saying this, Abraham seems to have understood the coming of the Son of God as “the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world” (John 1:29, 36). From our Epistle text, Abraham concluded that God was able to raise Isaac up from the dead if that was His plan (Hebrews 11:17-19).

Commenting on the contrary signals Abraham received and comparing them to our own, John Chrysostom said¹¹ that God accomplishes His purposes by contraries of contraries.

“What are you saying? If I give drink to my enemy, do I then punish him? (Proverbs 25:21-22, Romans 12:20). If I give up my goods, do I then possess them? (Matthew 19:29). If I humble myself, shall I then be exalted? (Matthew 20:26, 23:12). Yes, He says, for such is My power to give contraries by means of contraries. I abound in resources and in stratagems: do not be afraid. The nature of things follows My Will; I don’t wait for nature. I do all things; I am not controlled by them; wherefore also I am able to change their form and order”. “He then who admires the things here slights those yonder, since he judges these worthy of exertion, even though they’re so far inferior to the other”.

John Chrysostom pointed out¹² what was the real city that Abraham sought, and that virtue alone is the ornament of the inhabitants of the City of God. This does not compare to the beautiful, but material city of Sodom.

“Would you learn the truth respecting cities? What could be more illustrious than the cities of Sodom? For the houses and the buildings were splendid, and so were their walls; and the country was fat and fertile, and ‘like the Paradise of God’ (Genesis 13:10). But the tent of Abraham was humble and small, and had no fortification. Yet when a war took place, the invaders broke down and took the walled cities, and departed, carrying away their inhabitants captive. Abraham, however, the citizen of the desert, they could not resist when he attacked them! And so it was for he had true piety and a power much greater than numbers and the defense of walls. If you are a Christian, no earthly city is yours. Of our City ‘the Builder and Maker is God’ (Hebrews 11:10). Though we may gain possession of the whole world, we are but strangers and sojourners in it all! We are enrolled in heaven; our citizenship is there! Let us not, after the manner of little children, despise things that are great, and admire those which are little! Not our city’s greatness, but virtue of soul is our ornament and defense. If you suppose dignity to belong to a city, think how many persons must partake in this dignity, who are whoremongers, effeminate, depraved and full of ten thousand evil things; let us despise such honor! But that City above is not of this kind; for it is impossible that he can be a partaker of it, who has not exhibited every virtue”.

¹¹ John Chrysostom, Homilies on Hebrews, XXV, 4.

¹² John Chrysostom, Homilies on the Statues, XVII, 12.

“Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning the things to come” (Hebrews 11:20). This implies that Isaac knew the things to come (Compare Genesis 27:27-40). Chrysostom wondered¹³ about this, and noted that many righteous men waited to see what we see.

“How, except by faith, could a man sojourning in a strange land give such blessings? Many prophets and righteous men have desired to see what we see and did not see it, and to hear what we hear and did not hear it (Matthew 13:17). “The Son of God was, with good reason, revealed to those conspicuous in virtue”.

How then does this fit Jacob, who bought the birthright from Esau (Genesis 25:29-34) and then stole Esau’s blessing (Genesis 27)? Jacob’s virtue is that he wanted the things of God more than anything else, while Esau trivialized the things of God (Genesis 25:34). To Jacob, the birthright and the blessing of his father -- which included the promises God made to Abraham -- were like the treasure buried in a field and the pearl of great price (Matthew 13:44-46).

John Chrysostom noted¹⁴ that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob all had barren wives. This was not because of sin in their lives, but indicates the hand of God leading us to an appreciation of the Virgin birth of Christ.

“Isaac continued in prayer (Matthew 7:7-8) concerning Rebecca his wife, because she was barren. This first is worth inquiring into, for what cause she was barren. She lived admirably and with much chastity — both herself and her husband. We cannot say that the barrenness was the work of sin. And not only was she herself barren, but also his mother Sarah, who gave birth to him; not only was his mother barren and his wife, but also his daughter-in-law, Rachel, the wife of Jacob. What is the meaning of this band of barren ones? All were righteous; all lived in virtue; God witnessed to all of them. For it was of them that He said, ‘I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob’ (Luke 20:37). Of the same persons Paul also speaks. ‘For which cause God is not ashamed to call himself their God’ (Hebrew 11:16). Many are the commendations of them in the New Testament; many the praises of them in the Old Testament. On all sides they were bright and illustrious, and yet they all had barren wives, and continued in childlessness until an advanced period. When therefore you see man and wife living with virtue; when you see them beloved of God, caring for piety, and yet suffering the malady of childlessness; do not suppose that the childlessness is at all a retribution for sins. For many are God’s reasons for the dispensation, and to us inexplicable; and for all we must be heartily thankful, and think that only those who live in wickedness are wretched, not those who are childless. Often God does it expediently, though we don’t know the cause of events. On this account in every case it is our duty to admire His wisdom and to glorify His unspeakable love of man”.

“This consideration is able to school us in moral character, but it is necessary to state the cause for which those women were barren. It was in order that when you have seen the Virgin bringing forth our common Master, you might believe. Exercise your mind in the womb of the barren. When you have seen the womb, disabled and bound as it is, being opened to the bearing of children from the grace of God, you might not marvel at hearing that a virgin has brought forth”.

Moses and His Parents

Moses, the brother of Aaron, was also an ancestor of Christ, although that aspect is not included in either Matthew's or Luke's genealogy. According to tradition¹⁵, the Virgin Mary's grandfather, Matthan, was a priest. Luke records Matthan's grandson-in-law, Zachariah, as being a priest of the order of Abijah, the 8th Lot (1 Chronicles 24:10) and Elizabeth as being a daughter of Aaron (Luke 1:5). Since the Virgin Mary was Elizabeth's cousin, Mary was also among the daughters of Aaron as well as being descended from David and Judah. This means that Christ, in His earthly parentage, was descended from both a Priest and a King¹⁶.

Moses' parents, Amram and his wife Jochebed (Exodus 6:20), had three children: Miriam, the oldest, Aaron and Moses. By faith, they disregarded Pharaoh's command to drown male Hebrew children (Exodus 1:22) and hid Moses for three months (Exodus 2:2, Hebrews 11:23).

When Jochebed couldn't hide Moses any longer, she made a floating cradle and hid it among the reeds by the Nile. Miriam stood at a distance to find out what would happen. When Pharaoh's daughter came to bathe in the Nile and found Moses, she had pity on him since he was such a beautiful baby. In rushed Miriam and asked Pharaoh's daughter if she should go find a nurse. Of course, the nurse she found was Jochebed. Pharaoh's daughter then paid Jochebed to nurse her own son until he was weaned, at which point Pharaoh's daughter adopted Moses (Exodus 2:3-10). Thus Moses' parents gave their son up to the Lord's discretion twice: once to the Nile, which was infested with crocodiles, and once to the daughter of the evil tyrant.

Josephus, the 1st Century Jewish historian, adds¹⁷ some details to the above account. One of the Egyptian magicians, perhaps Jannes or Jambres (2 Timothy 3:8) or their predecessors had foretold to Pharaoh that a Hebrew child to be born soon would bring down the Egyptian kingdom, would free the Hebrews, would excel all men in virtue and would be remembered through all ages. This was why Pharaoh ordered the drowning of all male Hebrews. To enforce the decree, Pharaoh ordered the execution of the entire family of anyone who disobeyed. Paraphrasing Josephus, “Amram spent a lot of time in prayer over this and the Lord spoke to him in a dream. The Lord reminded Amram how He provided for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and told him the same prophesy that the Egyptian magicians had told Pharaoh. In addition, He also told Amram that his child will be concealed from the Egyptians and would be brought up in a surprising way”.

“Jochebed sent the floating cradle down the Nile where Pharaoh's daughter, Thermuthis, saw it coming and saw it come to rest in some reeds. Miriam followed Moses from the riverbank and watched as Thermuthis found him. At first, Thermuthis tried to get some Egyptian women to nurse Moses, but baby Moses wouldn't accept them. It was then that Miriam offered her solution: a Hebrew nursemaid”.

Moses, the Young Man

Moses spent his first forty years being schooled in all the wisdom of Egypt (Acts 7:22). At the age of forty, he chose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter and enjoy the passing pleasures of sin. Thus, he esteemed the reproach or reviling of Christ to be greater riches than the treasures of Egypt (Hebrews 11:24-26).

Josephus wrote¹⁸ about this also. The Egyptians had grown delicate and lazy, and had given themselves up to the pleasures of life, especially the love of wealth. As the Hebrew nation was blessed by God and grew numerous and wealthy by hard work, the Egyptians grew jealous and forced them into slave labor: digging canals, building city walls and building pyramids.

In the same section, Josephus also mentioned some royal intrigue in Pharaoh's house, where the magicians recognized Moses as the threat that they had predicted. But Thermuthis was Pharaoh's only child, and she was barren. Therefore Moses also represented Pharaoh's only heir. As a result, Pharaoh disregarded the advice of his magicians to kill Moses and instead protected him and raised him as the heir to the throne.

Josephus mentioned¹⁹ another account of Moses' early life, which is also quoted by Irenaeus²⁰. The Ethiopians, who were Southern neighbors to Egypt, began marching into Egypt, conquering Egyptian territory at will. The Egyptian magicians consulted their oracles, which told them to set Moses as commander of the army to stop the Ethiopian advance. Their plan was both to save Egypt and to kill Moses in the same process.

Moses, with the backing of Pharaoh and Thermuthis undertook this task with keen insight and clever strategy. The Ethiopians were expecting the Egyptians to advance on them by way of the Nile, since the route over the desert was difficult due to the multitude of poisonous snakes. Moses chose the desert route and brought along many wicker baskets full of a certain bird that is the natural enemy of the snakes. The birds cleared the way for the army and enabled Moses to take the Ethiopians by surprise and defeat them. This early activity of Moses may be what Stephen, the Protomartyr, referred to saying that Moses "was mighty in words and deeds" (Acts 7:22) before he left Egypt at age forty.

After Moses returned as a conquering hero, the magicians entertained a greater hatred of him than before²¹, and were able to sway Pharaoh to beware of him as a military force to be reckoned with. At this same time, the incident occurred where Moses saw an Egyptian taskmaster unjustly beating a Hebrew. Moses struck down the Egyptian and killed him, and buried him in the sand. (From the above accounts, it is apparent that Moses was strong and skilled with military weapons and movements!). The next day, he came upon two Hebrews fighting. Trying to act as a peacemaker, Moses spoke to them. But one of them replied, "Who made you a prince or a judge over us? Are you going to kill me as you killed the Egyptian?"

²¹ Josephus, Antiquities, II, xi, 1.

Then Moses realized that the event had become known. When Pharaoh heard of this, he tried to kill Moses, knowing that his general had now identified with the Hebrews as his magicians said he would. However, Moses left Egypt before Pharaoh could find him (Exodus 2:11-15).

John Chrysostom stated²² that the “reproach of Christ” that Moses received was that spoken by his own people: “Who made you a prince or a judge over us?” (Exodus 2:14). By his rank (heir to the throne, general in the Egyptian army), they should have welcomed him with open arms as a prince and a judge. Chrysostom compared this to the reproach Christ received from His own: “He came to His own and His own did not receive Him” (John 1:11). After they crucified Him, “those who passed by blasphemed Him, wagging their heads, saying, ‘if You are the Son of God, come down from the Cross’” (Matthew 27:39-40). Thus Moses and Christ suffered alike. Moses and Christ alike looked to the reward mentioned in our Epistle text (Hebrews 11:26, 12:2).

Our Epistle text states that “by faith Moses left Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the Pharaoh” (Hebrews 11:2; 7). Yet Exodus 2:14 states that Moses was afraid when the event of his killing the Egyptian taskmaster became known. John Chrysostom stated²³ that if Moses was truly afraid of Pharaoh, he would never have come back to lead Israel out of Egypt. Thus, even flight was an act of faith. To stay in Egypt, Chrysostom said, and to be a champion of the Hebrews, who were so ungrateful, would have been a foolish and senseless thing. It would have been equivalent to the devil’s temptation of Christ to cast Himself down from the pinnacle of the Temple, depending on angels to break His fall (Matthew 4:6). Our Epistle text gives the reason he left Egypt: “for he endured as seeing Him who is invisible” (Hebrews 11:27). Sometimes we also need to have the insight to leave a bad situation behind us rather than to stand and fight for justice that isn’t attainable and only results in blasphemy.

Moses and the Exodus

Our Epistle text states that by faith, Moses kept the Passover and the sprinkling of blood, lest He who destroyed the firstborn should touch them (Hebrews 11:28). This was the climax of Moses’ duel with Pharaoh in the course of the ten plagues.

The story of the Exodus began with Moses’ conversation with the Lord at the burning bush. Moses was pasturing the flock of his father-in-law Jethro in the neighborhood of Mt. Sinai, which is one of the peaks of Mt. Horeb. The Lord appeared to him in a blazing fire from the middle of a bush where the bush was burning but was not consumed (Exodus 3:1-2). Josephus adds²⁴ that the green leaves of the thorn bush and its flowers continued untouched as did its fruit branches even though the flame was great and fierce. St. Catherine’s Monastery was built on the spot of the burning bush in the 4th Century; the current residents continue to cultivate the “burning bush” which is a raspberry bush²⁵.

At the burning bush, the Lord sent Moses back to Egypt and told him what to expect. He told Moses what to say to the Hebrews and what to say to Pharaoh. He also gave Moses three signs to use in order that the Hebrews and Pharaoh might know God sent him. These were (1) his staff becoming a snake, (2) his hand becoming leprous, and (3) water turning into blood (Exodus 4:1-9). When Moses showed these signs to Pharaoh, the Egyptian magicians were able to duplicate each of them (Exodus 7:11, 22, 8:7). After some of the ten plagues, however, the Egyptian magicians, Jannes and Jambres (2 Timothy 3:8) recognized Moses' miracles as "the finger of God" (Exodus 8:19).

Before each of the ten plagues, Moses' request of Pharaoh was that the Hebrews might take a three-day journey into the wilderness to celebrate a feast to the Lord (Exodus 5:1-3, 7:16, 8:1, 8:20, etc.). After each plague struck, Pharaoh said that the Hebrews could go do this; but when Moses ended the plague, Pharaoh reneged. Each of the plagues was increasingly severe such that after the hail (Exodus 9:23-32) and the locusts (Exodus 10:12-15) nothing green was left on tree or plant anywhere but in Goshen where the Hebrews lived. Egypt's crops were ruined and her economy was decimated, leaving nothing to feed what livestock remained.

The 10th and final plague was on the first-born of everyone in Egypt, from Pharaoh to his lowest servants to all their livestock (Exodus 11:4-5). At midnight, the Lord went through the land of Egypt and executed judgment on man, beast and on all the gods of Egypt (Exodus 12:12). To avoid being judged with the gods of Egypt, the Hebrews (by faith) kept the Pascha (Greek for Passover); that is, the sprinkling on their door posts of the blood of the lamb that was sacrificed that evening. This Paschal celebration was to be done every year in remembrance of this event on the 14th day of Nisan, the first month of the year (Exodus 12:14-20). In 30 AD, on the 14th of Nisan, Jesus was crucified as the Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world (John 1:29).

After Israel left Egypt, Pharaoh changed his mind again and went after them (Exodus 14:5-9). Led by 600 select chariots (plus 50,000 cavalry and 200,000 foot soldiers according to Josephus²⁶, the Egyptians overtook the Hebrews at the Red Sea. Most maps of the Exodus place the Red Sea crossing at the Northwest tip where the Southern end of the Suez Canal now exists. At that time, the Red Sea narrowed down to about a 5-8 mile wide body of water. According to Josephus²⁷, Israel was then trapped between the Red Sea, the mountains and the Egyptian army.

According to our Epistle text, by faith, they passed through the Red Sea as on dry land (Hebrews 11:29). Moses stretched out his hand over the Red Sea and the Lord swept the sea back by a strong East wind all night so that the waters were a wall on their right and left (Exodus 14:21-22). Earlier that day, the pillar of cloud moved through their midst from in front of them to behind them to block the path of the Egyptian army (Exodus 14:19-20). Paul stated that because the Hebrews passed through the cloud and the sea, "all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea" (1 Corinthians 10:2).

In looking at the geography of this region, the Red Sea runs almost North-South at every potential crossing site. Therefore, a wind blowing from the East (compare Exodus 10:19) could not, by itself, push the waters back. However, it would have helped considerably in drying out the ocean bottom to allow people to cross on "dry land". The dividing of the waters had to have had supernatural help.

²⁶ Josephus, Antiquities, II, xv, 3.

²⁷ Josephus, Antiquities, II, xv, 3.

After the Hebrews crossed, the entire Egyptian army, led by Pharaoh, went in after them. However, “the Lord looked down on the army of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and cloud and brought the army of the Egyptians into confusion. That is, the Egyptians attempted to be baptized in the cloud and in the sea, but in their unbelief. And He caused their chariot wheels to swerve and He made them drive with difficulty so the Egyptians said ‘let us flee from Israel, for the Lord is fighting for them against us’” (Exodus 14:24-25). Too late! Just then Moses stretched his hand over the sea again and the waters returned to their normal state.

The waters returning to normal had the effect of a major tsunami. Josephus added²⁸ that there was a tremendous electrical storm that occurred as the Egyptian army was on the dry seabed.

“As soon as the whole Egyptian army was within it, the sea flowed to its own place and came down with a torrent raised by storms of wind. Showers of rain also came down from the sky and dreadful thunder and lightning with flashes of fire. Thunder bolts also darted upon them; everything that used to be sent by God upon men as indications of His wrath happened at this time”.

Thus the Egyptian army was electrocuted as well as drowned. As John Chrysostom wrote²⁹, the faith of Moses went beyond human reasoning, weakness and lowliness.

As a result of the Exodus, Egypt was ruined. Her crops were non-existent because of the plagues and her livestock were decimated. Her army was totally eliminated and all the surrounding nations knew it (Joshua 2:9-10). This left Egypt vulnerable to be conquered; some conquering nation could now enslave them as they had enslaved the Hebrews.

Sometimes we also find ourselves in predicaments from which there appears to be no escape: such as Moses was trapped between the sea, the mountains and a powerful army. Sometimes the only solution may be the resolve of Shadrach, Meshach and Abed-nego as they were about to be thrown into the furnace, “The Lord can save us if He wills; but even if He does not, we will not bow to idolatry” (Daniel 3:13-27 paraphrase).

The Conquest of Jericho

Before crossing the Jordan River into Canaan, Joshua sent spies in to view the land, especially Jericho, its forces and its morale (Joshua 2:1). Josephus wrote³⁰ that when they entered Jericho they were presumed to be harmless strangers who were curious about their city, and people took no notice. At evening, they retired to an inn kept by Rahab to eat supper. After eating, the king of Jericho got wind who they were and desired to examine them under torture to find out what their business was. Rahab heard of this and hid the spies under the stalks of flax on her roof. When the king’s soldiers came, she lied to them about the spies’ whereabouts (Joshua 2:2-7), even though it meant death for her and her family if she were discovered.

After the king’s soldiers left on a wild goose chase, she said to the spies that:

- She knew that the Lord had given them the land of Canaan (Joshua 2:9)

²⁸ Josephus, Antiquities, II, xvi, 3.

²⁹ John Chrysostom, Homilies on Hebrews, XXVII, 2.

³⁰ Josephus, Antiquities, V, 1, 2.

- The terror of you had fallen on everyone and everyone was completely demoralized (Joshua 2:9, 11)
- She had heard how the Lord dried up the Red Sea before them and wiped out Pharaoh's army (Joshua 2:10)
- She had heard what the Hebrews did to Sihon and Og and utterly destroyed them (Joshua 2:10, Numbers 21:21-39, Deuteronomy 3:1-11). This was very impressive since Og was a giant like Goliath (Deuteronomy 3:11)
- She recognized the Hebrews' God as the only God of heaven above and earth beneath (Joshua 2:11).

Therefore, she asked them to swear that they would treat her and her family kindly when they conquered Jericho in return for her treating them kindly. This they swore and gave her a scarlet rope to hang in her window when the city was taken in order to identify her house. Then she let them down by a rope through the window of her inn, since her inn was on the wall of the city, and they returned to the Hebrew camp (Joshua 2:12-24).

Following the destruction of Jericho, Rahab and her family were spared and lived in Israel with the Hebrews. Josephus wrote³¹ that Joshua held Rahab in great esteem afterwards and gave her and her family certain land as part of the division of the land among the twelve tribes. From today's Gospel lesson, Rahab married Salmon, an Israeli, and was the mother of Boaz who married Ruth, also a foreigner. Ruth was the grandmother of King David (Matthew 1:5-6).

Rahab's example of faith is unusual; James, the Lord's brother used her faith as an example of faith justified by works (James 2:25). We don't usually associate intentional falsehood with faith. But yet we would also be hard pressed to state what Rahab "should have done" in order to do the Lord's will to a fuller extent. She recognized the Kingdom of God and risked her life to be part of it.

Summary

The foregoing examples of faith from some of the better-known figures in the genealogy of Christ serve as examples for us regarding courage, faithfulness, perseverance and insight regarding the things of God. For discussion on other Old Testament figures mentioned in Hebrews 11, see the Sunday of All Saints and the 1st Sunday of Lent. The Epistle lesson concludes: "God has provided something better for us that they should not be made perfect apart from us" (Hebrews 11:40). The something better is the Body of Christ and access to the mysteries of God at the Lord's Table. Just as our forebears in the faith did not take lightly the things of God that were revealed to them, we dare not do so either.

John Chrysostom wrote³², "Consider the virtue of the saints: if here in this life they do as angels do (in partaking and acting upon the mysteries of God), what then will they do above?" The same can be said of us as we partake in faith of the mysteries of God.

³¹ Josephus, Antiquities, V, i, 7.

³² John Chrysostom, Homilies on Hebrews, XXVII, 7.

Basil the Great spoke³³ of his early life acquiring wisdom, and his journey to perfection by imitating some of the holy men that he met. These people he met were to him living examples of the saints that Paul referred to.

I had spent much time in vanity, and had wasted nearly all my youth in the vain labor of acquiring the wisdom made foolish by God. Then like a man roused from deep sleep, I turned my eyes to the marvelous light of the truth of the Gospel, and I perceived the uselessness of ‘the wisdom of the princes of this world, that comes to nothing’ (1 Corinthians 2:6). I wept many tears over my miserable life and I prayed that guidance might be granted me to admit me to the doctrines of the true Faith. First of all I was minded to make some mending of my ways, long perverted as they were by my intimacy with wicked men. Then I read the Gospel, and I saw there that a great means of reaching perfection was the selling of one’s goods, the sharing them with the poor, the giving up of all care for this life, and the refusal to allow the soul to be turned by any sympathy to things of earth. And I prayed that I might find someone of the brethren who had chosen this way of life, that with him I might cross life’s troubled strait. And many did I find in Alexandria, and in the rest of Egypt, others in Palestine, and in Syria, and in Mesopotamia. I admired their continence in living, and their endurance in toil; I was amazed at their persistency in prayer, and at their triumphing over sleep. Subdued by no natural necessity, ever keeping their souls’ purpose high and free, in hunger, in thirst, in cold, in nakedness (2 Corinthians 11:27), they never yielded to the body. They were never willing to waste attention on it; always, as though living in a flesh that was not theirs, they showed in deed what it is to sojourn for a while in this life (Hebrews 11:13), and what it is to have one’s citizenship and home in heaven (Philippians 3:20). All this moved my admiration. I called these men’s lives blessed, in that they showed in deed that they ‘bear about in their body the dying of Jesus’ (2 Corinthians 4:10). And I prayed that I, too, as far as in me lay, might imitate them.

Basil also spoke³⁴ of how the Church has guarded the dignity³⁵ of the mysteries (dogma), while proclaiming the Gospel (kerugma). We pray standing and facing East toward Paradise on the first day of the week, as we look for the Resurrection. The first day of the week is the 8th day, which is the same as the 1st day before the Fall. Pentecost also speaks toward this.

“The Apostles and Fathers, who laid down laws for the Church from the beginning, guarded the awesome dignity of the mysteries in secrecy and silence; for what is clamored randomly among the common folk is no mystery at all. This is the reason for our tradition of unwritten precepts and practices, that the knowledge of our teachings may not become neglected and despised by the multitude through familiarity. ‘Dogma’ and ‘Kerugma’ are two distinct things; dogma is observed in silence; kerugma is proclaimed to the entire world. One form of this silence is the obscurity employed in Scripture, which makes the meaning of ‘dogmas’ difficult to be understood for the advantage of the reader. Thus we all look to the East at our prayers, but few of us know that we are seeking our own old country (Hebrews 11:14), Paradise, which God planted Eastward in Eden (Genesis 2:8). We pray standing, on the first day of the week, but we do not all know the reason. On the day of the resurrection³⁶, we remind ourselves of the grace given to us by standing at prayer. This is not only because we rose with Christ, and are bound to ‘seek those things which are above’ (Colossians 3:1), but because the day seems to us to be in some sense an image of the age which we expect. Therefore, though it is the beginning of days, it is not called by Moses ‘the first day’, but ‘one³⁷ day’ (Genesis 1:5). For he says, ‘There was evening, and there was morning, one day’, as though the same day often recurred. Now ‘one’ and ‘eighth’ are the same, the state which follows after this present time, the day which knows no evening, and no successor, that age which doesn’t end or grow old. Of necessity, the Church teaches her own foster children to offer their prayers on that day standing, that through continual reminder of the endless life we may not neglect to make provision for our departure there. Moreover the whole of Pentecost is a reminder of the resurrection expected in the age to come. That one and first day, seven multiplied by seven, completes the seven weeks of the holy Pentecost. Beginning at the first, Pentecost ends with the same, making fifty revolutions through the intervening days. And so it is a likeness of eternity, beginning as it does and ending, as in a circling course, at the same point. On this day the rules of the Church have educated us to prefer the upright attitude of prayer, for by their plain reminder they make our mind to dwell no longer in the present but in the future. Moreover every time we fall upon our knees and rise up, we show by deed that by our sin we fell down to earth, and by the loving kindness of our Creator, we were called back to heaven”.

John Cassian connected³⁸ the City that God prepares for us to our participation in this City after we pass from this life. The life in our souls begins to taste beforehand something of what is reserved for them at the Last Judgment. This contrasts with the heretics, who claim that we are deprived of perception after our departure.

“There are then many who while still living in this body are dead, lying in the grave, and cannot praise God. On the contrary there are many who though they are dead in the body yet bless God in the spirit, and praise Him, according to this³⁹, ‘O you spirits and souls of the righteous, bless the Lord’, and ‘every spirit shall praise the Lord’ (Philippians 2:10; Psalm 150:6). The souls of those that are slain are not only said to praise God but to address Him also (Revelation 6:9-10). The Lord said with still greater clearness to the Sadducees, ‘Have you not read that which was spoken by God, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. He is not the God of the dead but of the living: for all live to Him’. Of whom Paul said, ‘wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for He has prepared for them a city’ (Hebrews 11:16). That they are not idle after the separation from this body, and are capable of feeling, the parable in the Gospel shows, which tells us of the beggar Lazarus and Dives clothed in purple. One of these obtained a position of bliss, i.e., Abraham's bosom; the other was consumed with the dreadful heat of eternal fire (Luke 16:19-25). But if you care to understand the words spoken to the thief, 'Today you shall be with Me in Paradise' (Luke 23:43), this clearly shows that not only does their former intelligence continue with the souls, but also that in their changed condition they partake of some state which corresponds to their actions and deserts! For the Lord would certainly never have promised him this, if He had known that his soul, after being separated from the flesh, would either have been deprived of perception or have been resolved into nothing. It was not his flesh but his soul, which entered Paradise with Christ. We must avoid, and shun with the utmost horror, that wicked punctuation of the heretics, who do not believe that Christ could be found in Paradise on the same day on which He descended into hell. They thus punctuate 'Truly, I say to you today', and making a stop apply, 'you shall be with Me in Paradise' (Luke 23:43). They imagine that this promise was not fulfilled at once after he departed from this life, but that it will be fulfilled after the resurrection. They do not understand what He declared to the Jews before His resurrection, where they fancied that He was hampered by human difficulties and weakness of the flesh as they were. 'No man has ascended into heaven, but He who came down from heaven, even the Son of man who is in heaven' (John 3:13), by which He clearly shows that the souls of the departed are not deprived of their reason, and they have such feelings as hope and sorrow, joy and fear. They already are beginning to taste beforehand something of what is reserved for them at the last judgment, and that they are not, as some unbelievers hold, resolved into nothing after their departure from this life. They live a more real life, and are still more eager in waiting on the praises of God".
